

I arrived from Belgium to Australia in order to discover how an international NGO works. I am glad to say that the time I spent at DTP was very rewarding and interesting in many ways. I learnt more about human rights in general, about the Australian and other cultures. Working in a small structure as DTP gave me the opportunity to execute diverse tasks. We could meet human rights defenders and learn more about the different issues they defend. The wonderful team trusted me and gave me some interesting work to do. Working with this team was a very good human experience. Thanks a lot for your time and your patience :-)
